ART

SENTIENT ART COLLABORATIONS

COLLABORATION WITH LOCAL ARTISTS ON ONE-OF-A-KIND SAPIENCE CHAIRS

SENTIENT celebrated the fusion of art and functionality by initiating a bespoke collaboration, in which the clean geometric lines and the sculptural elegance of our Sapience Chair served as an inspiration for artistic alchemy. Renowned for its composed arrangement of diamond-shaped supports, horizontal seating, and angled backrest, the Sapience Chair was reimagined through the hands of visionary artists.

In this collaboration, each artist brought their unique sensibilities to bear on the chair's solid wood and veneer structure. With a diverse palette of wood species, finishes, and upholstery options at their disposal, these creators transformed the Sapience Collection into a gallery of functional art. The resulting pieces were more than mere furniture; they were storied artifacts, each bearing the indelible mark of its maker's imagination.

This collaboration enriched our design ethos, intertwining SENTIENT's commitment to craftsmanship with the distinctive narratives of contemporary art. The chairs that emerged from this partnership were not simply seating—they were individual chronicles of the Sapience Collection's journey through the hands of artistry.

SENTIENT × GORDI NASSERI

"When presented with the Sapience chair, I was taken aback by its otherworldly elegance and was inspired by the symmetry and sleek contours. The surface planes of the chair reminded me of the panels in a comic book, something that, as an illustrator, I am all too familiar with. I decided to revisit some of my early sketches from my days in art school in search of that special something, and in searching, I found it—or rather, I found "them." As though meant for this chair, these live model studies fit perfectly in the shallow niches of the chair's sides, and have now been given a chance to live within its striking silhouette."

SENTIENT × LE STUDIO ANTHOST

"By using handcrafted surfaces and uncommon techniques, Le Studio Anthost transforms fabric into a precious material imbued with mystery, becoming a material that invites touch, imparts elegance, and inspires fantasy.

For this collaboration, we chose an upcycled material that combines the softness and warmth of the wool against the rough yet sleek qualities of rubber. It's a combo that vibes rock and roll, albeit with undeniable luxury."

SENTIENT X HERNÁN RIVERA LUQUE

"I chose the raw wooden Sapience chair initially, and simply, because of the similarity with the wooden board panels I have recently been working with. I was immediately drawn to it because of this.

One of the interesting aspects of this chair is its sculptural quality. With its creases and folds, it reveals and simultaneously hides the added collaged content, creating complexity of the surface. The vinyl elements are mined from advertisement posters, and the resulting cut-outs are mostly devoid of any recognizable content. However, on occasion, a few do jump out at you—your eye can just make out what might be part of a chain, or skin, or some kind of fabric. In this way, your eye is, in a sense, tricking you—as if you are looking at a crack in the surface, one that allows you to only see part of the whole. It is like an unfinished story, giving the viewers an unsolved and open-ended experience."

SENTIENT × RICCARDO VECCHIO

“The images depicted on the Sapience Chair and the accompanying silk screens displayed here are an extension of Riccardo Vecchio’s broader public arts project, 31 Degrees. 31 Degrees gives visibility to environmental injustice by bringing attention to disparities in tree coverage, with drawings that will be translated into murals to bring arboreal beauty to areas where walls are more prevalent than trees. 31 Degrees aims to work with city agencies, organizations, and communities to facilitate the planting of trees in neighborhoods that need them most.

The project’s title comes from a recent collaborative study, part of a larger heat-mapping initiative in cities across North America, which heat-mapped parts of upper Manhattan and the Bronx, helping identify areas of environmental concern. 31 Degrees references one particular day in July when the temperature difference varied by that amount between an upper-middle-class area in Manhattan and one of the city’s poorest neighborhoods, predominantly communities of color, in the Bronx. The study found that due to low levels of tree coverage and green space, poorer neighborhoods, predominantly communities of color, are disproportionately negatively impacted by heat. Not only is heat distributed unequally in NYC, creating what is known as urban heat islands, but its distribution follows other patterns of inequality, such as race and income inequality.

Vecchio juxtaposes the angular symmetry of the Sapience Chair with the undulating, organic qualities of the original pen-and-ink drawings created for 31 Degrees. The newly imagined compositions attempt to maintain the impact of the site-specific murals, utilizing the same visual language of the larger public works. These images are silk-screened onto wood veneer and then adhered to the chair using sustainable materials.”

PIGEON POETICS CONCEPT BY ALIREZA YAVARI

The latest design of SENTIENT's Sapience Chair introduces an unexpected embroidery pattern, inspired by the spontaneous markings often found in urban landscapes. This unique design element, enhanced with gold leaf and pearls, boldly critiques the luxury market's tendency towards pretension, cleverly questioning the authenticity and exclusivity of mass-produced luxury items.

By integrating urban elements into sophisticated design, the art installation encourages a reconsideration of what constitutes true luxury. This chair does not conform to convention. Instead, it stands as a bold statement against the bland uniformity that often characterizes high-end design, promoting a more genuine and thoughtful approach to what is considered luxurious and desirable in contemporary interiors.
